HYBRID REGIONAL WORKSHOP ON Safety for Journalists: Risks, Threats & Opportunities

(7-10 December 2021)

BACKGROUND

Across the world, journalists are increasingly faced with threats, defamation, harassments, which often have political and economic undertones to pressurize journalists and media organizations for the investigation of any corruption or social inefficiency. Often, journalists come across dilemmas in decision-making that define ethical behavior boundaries while crafting their stories. There is a thin line between legally correct and ethically correct.

One wrong step can lead to a series of problems. Generally, the social rules may have the intent of offering clear guidance, but this is usually hammered out in test case, after test case. An intensive course in safety for journalists and assessing media law is an important starting point for contemporary journalists.

AIMS & OBJECTIVES

This four-day course will help participants understand most frequent questions on the matters of libel, privacy, emotional distress, newsgathering, intellectual property, regulation of the media - electronically and in print – and where a reporter's privilege begins and ends.

The intensive hybrid workshop will help participants understand the various risks in the journalistic world. Some of the key objectives of this workshop are:

Some of the key objectives of this workshop are:

- Understanding the responsibilities of media organization and the reporters conducting risk assessments
